OF THE

GAZETTE

We take pride, and propose to do our utmost to keep pace with the rapid advances that are now being made in the "Art of Printing."

Within a few years such decided changes have been made in the style of the productions of the type foundries of this country that printing executed only five years ago has already an old-fashioned appearance when placed beside the work of to-day.

To be in the leading ranks—to execute printing in the latest modern style—is our aim and ambition, and thus to give a certain "tone" to the stationery of our business houses, that, as it is sent out over the world, shall mark Weymouth as a place where modern ideas prevail.

In the classes of work where the demand is for a low price rather than for excellence, we can meet the competition of any, and by rushing such work through in the least possible time, make it pay us a fair profit.

DON'T FORGET

When you want any kind of printing, that you have a good office in your own town which it is your duty to support by your patronage.

IN A HOSPITAL

The Probationary Period in the Training of a Nurse.

Embryo Florence Nightingales Must be Receptive and Active.

Mrs. Frederick Blaneckel Jones in an article in Scribner's describes the training of a nurse as follows: We each begin our duty in the hospital as probationers on a month's trial; this beginning is very new to most of us, quite unlike anything in our previous lives. Before entering the school, some of us may have imagined that we had a peculiar fitness for nursing, even if we did not consider ourselves born nurses.

We may have made up our minds that we knew how to make a poultice, and to care for the sick by being kind to them and ventilating their rooms. We may possibly have read Miss Nightingale's "Notes," and so are quite sure that we know something of nursing; but that the hospital training will give us a sort of standing, and therefore it will be a desirable thing to have. As we proceed with our training we discover that we did not know how to make a poultice, nor how best to care for a sick person.

Some of us, again, know nothing at all about nursing, but we are not expected to know anything. A head nurse prefers to train the raw material, so to speak, in her own way.

What is required is that the probationer be receptive, that she be intelligent and above all, active; and in case she has any knowledge of nursing, or ideas, or opinions, if she is discriminating she will keep them to herself.

We have no dreams time; there is no place for sentiment, and very little for sympathy in the ordinary sense of the word. Were we to sympathize with all the woes that we see we should be upset, we should be.

A probationer enters the ward for the first time, and is introduced to her head nurse. She is then probably set to do some simple piece of work, such as arranging a closet, or folding clothes and the like. On the next day she will have her regular duties to learn. As the afternoon goes on she may find herself looking at the clock watching for 5:30 P.M., to come so that she may go off duty, and she has, probably, had a headache. There is a hospital atmosphere, produced by the smell of drugs and other unavoidable odors, perceptible to a fresh nose; there are strange sights and sounds which, combined, give a sort of shock for the first day.

Uncle Sam's Only Chinese Soldier.

E. D. Colota is a native-born Chinaman. He has lived in this country nearly forty years, having left the land of his birth when he was 6 years old. Although but 15 years old when the civil war broke out, he declared that he was over age and enlisted in the Twenty-third Massachusetts Volunteers, under command of Col. Andrew Elvord.

The only representative of the Mongolian race among the millions of men thus facing each other in a struggle for life and death, Colota was a unique character. Under fire Colota proved that he was made of stern stuff, for his bravery was commented on during various engagements, notably at Cold Harbor and in the building of Gen. Butler's signal station front of Petersburg.

Promptly Excused.

The Rev. Myron Reed recited an amusing incident of his military career at the loyal Legion banquet the other night. His regiment got into Nashville one morning, and the following morning he was told to go and relieve the guard at the Capitol. He took up his company, and was told the first business was to put the prisoners to work to clean out the place. He set to work with mops, pails and brooms, and just as they were fairly at work a person came up and wanted to know what he was doing making such a noise.

During His Own Way.

"Why did you run away from home?" said Josina Whitecomb of the rugged young trumpet.

"Because I wanted to have my own way."

"Well, you look as though you'd had it," Whitecomb's sentiments reply.

The boy who is eager to have his own way is continually met with, and many times it is an extremely hard way. The tyranny of home is of the mildest sort, he finds, compared with what he has to undergo in endeavoring to have his own way. Many times he falls into evil company, and in initiating their way and making it his own, he discovers himself on the way to a reformatory or prison. Ask the wretched old tramp whom you find sitting on the park bench, how he began his downward career, and if he be candid he will tell you trying to have his own way.—(Texas Statesman.)

The Problem Solved.

This writer says that half the miseries of married life come from the fact that wives do not have a certain, regular sum per week to spend as they please.

Husband—True; and the other half of the history comes from the fact that husbands do not have a certain, regular sum per week to spend as they please.

Boston Baked Beans.—For Sunday's breakfast, boil one quart small white beans in two waters, pouring off the first after a short time. Let them cool. Put the two tablesponts of oil into a bowl, add a half teaspoonful of salt, and a dash of pepper, and add the one tablespontful of vinegar gradually. Pour this over the beans and serve with the water.

Boston Baked Beans.—For Sunday's

breakfast, boil one quart small white beans in two waters, pouring off the first after a short time. Let them cool. Put them in the bean-pot with half a pound of salt pork, one tablespoonful of molasses, and a very little bacon.

Bake all day and night in a slow oven. In the morning pour them out into a dish and serve with the pork on top.

Observations Among the Clouds.

Professor Muller, of Cuyerville, has made some interesting observations on clouds. The highest clouds, cirrus and cirro-stratus, rise on average to a height of nearly 30,000 feet.

The middle clouds keep at about 10,000 feet to 23,000 feet in height, while the lower clouds reach to between 3000 and 7000 feet. The cumulus clouds float with their lower surface at a height of from 4000 to 5000 feet, while their summits rise to 16,000 feet.

The tops of the Alpes are often hidden by clouds of the third class, but the bottom of the clouds of the second class, and especially of the diamond clouds, often envelop them. The vertical dimensions of a cloud observed by Professor Muller on the Notberg was over 1200 feet. He stepped out of it at a height of about 3700 feet, and high above the mountain floated clouds of the middle class, while cells of mist lay in the ravines and clefts. The upper clouds were growing thicker, while the lower ones were dissolving, and soon it began to rain and snow.—(New York Telegram.)

The Editors.

We are pleased that our foreman, H. F.
Johnston, should be elected to the Legislature, and hope that his influence will be exercised in our behalf. We trust, however, that resulting from the election of Mr. Johnston, there will be a chance for a change of affiliation should a Braintree employee win the watch; we have decided to withdraw his name from the contest in order to elicit a receipt for any of our employees.

The popular Republican candidate for president in '92 is now James G. Blaine, indeed, laisser, "Reciprocity," Bradshaw how he may be called.

The ball has been calling in all directions ever since election and Hon. Clancy McDermott sought the sentiment of the people and gave the ball an onward push to his specat the dinner of the New York Chamber of Commerce.

The result of the late election makes the re-nomination of Harrison a very unlikely event. It is now quite among the probabilities that the doughty antagonist of 1888 will be again pitted against him, and that the debate in '92, Blaine to head and shoulders in ability to his nearest rival, in the estimation of the Republican party, and Cleveland's most likely competitor, Hill, who is an able man, cannot command the support of his entire party. It would be an exciting campaign.

General Hawley talks of the possibilities among the candidates, but he fails to say it is only to make a prediction as well as largely a question of time, and the recompensation must be left for before he can say who will be the most available candidate.

It strikes us that the best and ablest man will be the most available candidate, regardless of whether he fails or succeeds in the race.

Taking an inferior man simply to please one state or one section will tend to greatly increase the list of doubtful states.

We received the following, enclosing the money for a year's subscription:

"Hope I am not supporting a mugwump or democratic paper. But it seems to me the paper deserves the paper."

We are no mugwump or democratic paper and neither are we republican. We strive to be independent and unbiased. It is true, in many ways, that we do little. But that our paper is approved of by the people is greatly increased circulation demonstrates. If the criticism happened to be against the Republicans, this time, do not hesitate to say so. We shall have a chance to speak in its defense.

The great center of interest during the past week has been in the financial reports from London and Wall street. Last Saturday news came that the great banking house of Barings had failed. London was in utter consternation and would be so long.

The value of all securities was reduced and the general confidence shaken, which resulted in a sudden stridency in the money market and the failure of a few weak houses.

A paper originated in New York, but the circulation was somewhat delayed by later news that the Bank of England, the Rothschild, and other banking houses had extended aid and guaranteed the accounts of Baring Bros., to tide them over their temporary embarrassment.

The firm of Barings Bros. has been established for nearly a century and has long been regarded as being almost solid as the Bank of England itself. Their financial operations have been stupendous in magnitude and many nations have been safeguarded for their favors. After the great European war they paid off the enormous indebtedness of $500,000,000 by which France was burdened with the payment of the armies. Bicheno said of them: "There are six great powers in Europe—England, France, Russia, Austria, Prussia and Baring Bros."

Several of the family have held titles and high government positions.

The coming fall will be due to a nervous course of inactivity in the earliest of the Argentine Republic which have declined in value and on which that country cannot even pay the interest.

It is thought that while their present difficulties will be safely tide over, the firm will not regain its former standing.

Still Upward.

Last week our issue of 180 copies was not enough to supply the demand. Receiving increasing orders from all quarters, we print a issue of 200 this week and trust that she will be able to supply every demand. To take the GAZETTE a regular weekly visitor in every home is our aim.

To Supply All Previous Efforts.

The coming fall of the Ladies Cemetery Improvement Association, of Weymouth, promises to surpass all previous efforts in that direction. The opening night, Dec. 1, will be full of interest including the appearance of the Boston Singers, the Harpists and Banjo Club with J. C. Walker, who will present an entire new program of college songs, banjo music etc. This club has become famous for the excellence of its entertainment, and are engaged at quite an expense. They should be warmly greeted by all who are interested.

Our particular club will be summoned next week. Let the evenings of Dec. 1st, 2nd, and 3rd be reserved for this fair as the object is one which is worthy of your liberal patronage and support.

Wards IV and V.

There has been a large amount of work done this fall in repairing the highways in Wards IV and V. The most part of the road now is from Dr. C. G. Towne's part of the depot, which we think will soon be better. Pleasant street from the Catholic Church to Lovell's corner has been graded by Mr.
Moore, and put in first class shape. The roads in this section are much better than they have been for a long time.

"My husband is the salt of the earth," said a grocer's wife. "Yes, I know he is, for I told me the other day when he sold me some soap and told me it was as good and economical as Brussels," replied the customer.

THANKSGIVING.

REMARKABLE LONGEVITY.

Proclamation.
The great majority of the inhabitants have been blessed with the closing days of the passing year, which has been full of the blessings of peace and prosperity. The welfare of the population has come to us for the work of our minds and of our hands in every way. Therefore I, Benjamin Harrison, President of the United States of America, in the present month of November, to be observed as a day of prayer and thanksgiving, and to be observed from their lairs, to meet in their assembled houses of worship and to join in rendering thanks to God for the blessings He has granted to us as a nation, and invoking the blessing of the Almighty upon us.

Bearing the above vocal selections were led by Mrs. Taylor and Mr. A. K. Kidder, Mrs. Sarah E. Bayard, Mrs. Edith Burrell and Mrs. Mary A. Marden. Mrs. Taylor received a number of useful presents, including a piano, a typewriter, a book of poems, a silver cup, a small silver vase, a silver bracelet and a handkerchief decorated with her initials.

At the close of the service, the original poem, composed for the occasion by Mrs. Oliver Morris of Weymouth, was read by the author. The guests were treated to a substantial meal, and the young ones were given a special treat.

KING OF BEASTS.

A Famous Hunter Awards the Scepter to the Lion.

His Careless Bravery Has Nearly Resulted in Extinction.

Sir Samuel Baker, the African traveler, considers the lion the monarch of beasts, and describes the diminution in the number of lions to the slumberer by men which is the result of the fearlessness with which the lion exposes himself.

There is nothing he says in his new book, "so beautiful or enjoyable to my ears" as the roar of a lion upon a still night, when every thing is calm and no sound disturbs the solitude except the awe-inspiring notes, like the rumble of distant thunder, as they die away into the deepest base.

The first few notes somewhat resemble the bellow of a bull; these are repeated in slow succession four or five times, after which the voice is sunk into a lower key, and a number of quick, short roars are at length followed by rapid coughing notes, so deep and powerful that they seem to vibrate through the earth."

Wild animals are terrible in combat, they are still grander when their intentions are pacific. "Upon several occasions," says Sir Samuel, "I have seen lions close to me when I have had no opportunity of shooting, and they have invariably passed on without the slightest sign of angry feeling.

I was riding along a very desolate path, and a lioness, followed by five nearly full-grown young ones, walked quietly from the jungle, and then crossed within a few yards of my horse's head, apparently without fear or evil disposition. I well remember, at the close of a long march, we halted beneath a large tree, which I considered would form an agreeable shade for our repose.

"I gave my rifle to a servant, who deposited it against the trees, preparatory to my dismounting, when lions emerged from the bushes and walked unconcernedly through our party, within only a few feet of the startled horses. She disappeared without having condescended to increase her pace. Upon another occasion I had dried the grass, which had a perfectly clean surface after the blaze. The night was bright moon light, and I was standing in front of the tent door when a large maned lion and lioness crossed the open space within ten or twelve yards from my position and stood for a few moments regarding the white tent; they passed slowly forward, but had disappeared before I had time to return with a rifle."

Sir Samuel Baker says that in the early days of the world's history the lion occupied a very extensive area. It was common in Mesopotamia and in Syria, in Persia and throughout the whole of India. It is now confined to a limited number in Guezart, and a few in Persia. Beyond these localities it has ceased to exist. In Asia, there can be little doubt that, unless specially protected, it will become extinct in Asia within the next hundred years. Africa is the only portion of the globe where the lion remains lord of the forest, as the king of beasts. The question has frequently been discussed, "Why should the lion have vanished from the same where in ancient days he reigned in all his glory?" The answer is simple, the lions have been exterminated.

"There is a nobility in the character of a lion that differs entirely from the slyness of tigers, leopards and the feline race in general. Although the lion is fond of dense retreats, he exposes himself in many ways, which the tiger seldom or never does, unless compelled by a line of beaters. This exposure, or carelessness of concealment, renders his destruction comparatively easy. On the other hand, the lion brings forth a numerous family, generally five or six at a birth, which should keep up the number of the race; in spite of this, however, nature has made him an attraction to the mighty hunter, man has proved too much for him."

A Poor Opinion of the Horse.
Sir Samuel Baker, the African traveler, considers the horse "next-door to a lunatic." But it may be remembered to the advantage of that familiar quadruped, that Sir Samuel's experience in hunting have mainly in Asia and Africa, where but little hunting is done on horseback, and where the climates are unfavorable to the horse. He considers the elephant as overrated animal, so far as intelligence goes, and, when it is found that the dog, holds that the dog is man's friend and the elephant man's slave.—[New York World.]

To be in the leading ranks—to execute printing in the latest modern style—is our aim and ambition, and thus to give a certain "tone" to the stationery of our business houses, that, as it is sent out over the world, shall mark Weymouth as a place where modern ideas prevail.

Within a few years such decided changes have been made in the style of the productions of the type founders of this country that printing executed only five years ago has already an old-fashioned appearance when placed beside the work of to-day.

THE KING OF BEASTS.

A Famous Hunter Awards the Scepter to the Lion.

His Careless Bravery Has Nearly Resulted in Extinction.

Sir Samuel Baker, the African traveler, considers the lion the monarch of beasts, and describes the diminution in the number of lions to the slumberer by men which is the result of the fearlessness with which the lion exposes himself.

There is nothing he says in his new book, "so beautiful or enjoyable to my ears" as the roar of a lion upon a still night, when every thing is calm and no sound disturbs the solitude except the awe-inspiring notes, like the rumble of distant thunder, as they die away into the deepest base.

Many of the Duke of Sutherland's holdings are let in stream spaces or lengths of no more than six rods each. Some of the larger deer forests of Scotland may be mentioned. Carrichill, in Argyllshire, extends over 35,000 acres. In Aberdeen, the Forest of Marr is fifteen miles long and eight wide. Glenay Forest in Inverness-shire is about seven miles long; Galk comprises nearly 11,000 acres, and Glenavon contains 22,000 acres. In Sutherlandshire the Dunc-Chat forest is fifty miles long and twenty wide, while Dunc-Moss forest is more than half as large.

The great Glenay Forest, in Perthsire, famous by the genius of Scott, is said to contain about 1500 red deer. The glory of Scotland to the sportsman, however, is the magnificent forest of Athol, Blair-Athol, which now contains nearly 8000 deer at the large.

As it is solely occupied by the prince, the Duke of Athol, who is a strict preserver of the breed, if it is the acme of social and hunting beauty to one admitted to the chase in these noble grounds. The English sportsman who has killed one Athol deer, is almost as great a scoundrel in Great Britain.—[New York Commercial Advertiser.]

The Scottish shooting and fishing grounds almost entirely vast tracts as well as ridiculously insignificant bounds. Among the shooting areas of from five to 250,000 acres are found, while the heart of the London clerk thrills with exultation eleven months in the year as he gaily bows of his shooting in Scotland, which may comprise no more than six rods each.
